Students Tackle Jail Issues in New Pro Bono Recognition Program Initiative

Georgia State University College of Law students have been working with inmates at the Fulton County Jail in an effort to provide relief from problems caused by severe overcrowding and understaffing at the jail. The Fulton County Jail Project is the inaugural pro bono initiative of the College of Law's new Pro Bono Recognition Program, which is designed to emphasize to law students that pro bono service is an essential part of their professional life. The pro bono program provides many opportunities and college recognition for student volunteer work.

After the Southern Center for Human Rights filed a lawsuit on behalf of inmates at the jail last June, federal Judge Marvin Shoob placed the jail in the hands of a federal receiver, John Gibson. In a meeting between Gibson, Dean Steven Kaminshine and Stephen Bright, director of the Southern Center, Gibson agreed to give student volunteers access to the inmates in an effort to help resolve issues. More than 40 students signed up to work on the project.

They attended mandatory training sessions conducted by the Southern Center staff and Professor Mark Kadish, director of the project, participated in interviews at the prison and follow-up work on behalf of the inmates.

Sometimes the students are simply able to provide inmates with information about their situation: the timing of hearings, the nature of the charges, pending charges in other counties and transfer and release

Participants in the Fulton County Jail Project gather in the Law Library. issues. At other times, they were able to alert the prison officials to health and safety concerns expressed by the inmates. All students worked in teams accompanied by a faculty member. A special thank you extends to Professors Kadish, Podgor and Sobelson. In total, they processed more than 400 inmate requests for assistance.

"We greatly appreciate the cooperation of the Fulton County Jail's administration and staff in helping make this project a reality," said Associate Dean Anne Emanuel. A few students continued to work at the jail over the winter break under Professor Kadish's supervision. The project resumed full force this semester.

Dean's Message

The College of Law has come very far very fast, and as we enter our second generation, we are poised to move to the next level on our path of becoming a great public law school. The secret of our past success and our optimism for the future is simple to state: we are blessed with a talented and dedicated faculty and staff, quality students, and successful and supportive alumni and friends. This combination of talent and support is the engine that drives the law school, and this past fall has been no exception.

Beginning in August, the College launched its first two centers, the Center for Law, Health and Society and the Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth. These centers promise to enhance the College's reputation regionally and nationally, expand educational opportunities for students, and serve as catalysts for research, community partnerships, and attracting resources. Under the leadership of Professor Charity Scott, the Health Center already has launched a distinguished speaker series, a faculty fellows program to attract leading national figures in the health law field, an innovative Health Law Partnership (HeLP) with Children's Healthcare of Atlanta and Atlanta Legal Aid, and a legislative advocacy program for students interested in health legislation and policy. Under the leadership of Professors Colin Crawford, Julian Juergensmeyer, and Janice Griffith, the Metro Growth Center has been equally active in its first year, creating an "Urban Fellows" program that will provide forums for law students to meet with public and private policymakers, a foreign enrichment course to be taught by visiting international scholars, and an international studies program to begin this summer in Rio de Janeiro.

As we plan programs for the future, we must also strive to offer students fresh opportunities for developing the lawyering skills demanded by today's practice and an understanding of the expectations that come with being a member of the profession. Our nationally acclaimed Tax Clinic, Externship Program and our successful Moot Court and Mock Trial programs have long offered students excellent opportunities for skills development. This fall we have been able to expand these opportunities in two important ways: the launching of a Criminal Justice Clinic under the leadership of Professor Clark Cunningham, and the creation of a Pro Bono Recognition Program. Both new programs have been enormously successful. Students in the new clinic have tackled a demanding caseload and had the rare opportunity this fall to defend (successfully) a client charged with murder. With the Pro Bono Recognition Program students have responded to the call for pro bono service with incredible gusto and enthusiasm.

We also have been most fortunate this year to continue to benefit from the support and involvement of our alumni and friends. Our Board of Visitors, under the leadership of new chair, John T. Marshall, partner at Powell Goldstein, has formed six key working committees that will assist us in examining issues that are important to the law school's future. This fall we also saw the formal establishment of two significant alumni-led initiatives: the Intellectual Property Advisory Board which will help the College build a nationally recognized Intellectual Property program, and the Graduate Health Law Network which will help support the development of the new Health Law Center. In November, the Graduate Leadership Council expanded its annual "Newly Minted Lawyers" reception in honor of our most recent graduates to add an orientation program about alumni activities and giving opportunities. And in December the College of Law faculty hosted a luncheon for College of Law alumnus Glenn Richardson, Class of '84, in honor of his becoming the next Speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, the first College of Law graduate to hold statewide office. Joining the celebration were other law alums who hold seats in the Georgia Assembly: Rick Golick '92, Bill

Another factor critical to our future success is the need for state-of-the-art facilities and space within which to grow. Clearly, this will require a new building, and while that is not likely to happen in the immediate future, it is something we must begin to plan for now. This fall the University endorsed such planning by referring to a new law building in its new Strategic Plan. In the meantime, while space is tight, the University continues to support our efforts to upgrade aspects of our existing facilities where possible. We completed three such upgrades this fall: new carpet for the Law Library; a technology make-over for the Courtroom that will expose students to the kind of multi-media features found in many of today's federal and state courthouses; and the renovation of a 60-seat classroom. I encourage you to view these improvements when you visit us.

Finally a word about publicity for the College of Law. We all were quite pleased this fall that—indicative of our growing reputation—the national media looked to members of our faculty as sources for major stories. National Public Radio's Morning Edition featured Lynn Hogue in a story about legal challenges to the military's extension of tours of duty in Iraq. National Public Radio's Weekend Edition featured Eric Segall in a story about the constitutional implications of student requests to leave school early for Islamic religious observances. Newsweek magazine and the Sunday New York Times quoted Mark Budnitz extensively in separate stories about the legal and regulatory issues involved in online banking.

This coverage is wonderful, but it represents just a fraction of the important work being done by our faculty and our alumni that is worthy of such publicity. Indeed, we have long known that, while the law school has come very far, we have

Emanuel is Named Associate Dean

Professor Anne Emanuel moved to the associate dean's office on July 1st, when former Associate Dean Steven Kaminshine became interim dean of the College of Law. Dean Emanuel has been a member of the faculty since 1986; prior to that she clerked for both federal and state court judges and practiced with the Atlanta firm of Huie, Brown & Ide. Dean Emanuel served as the reporter for the Georgia Trust Code of 1991 and continues to teach in the area of wills, trusts and fiduciary administration, as well as criminal law and criminal procedure. She is presently serving as chair of the Georgia Assessment Team of the ABA Death Penalty Moratorium Implementation. Dean Emanuel reports that after 18 years on the faculty, she is surprised as associate dean to learn something new about the College of Law almost every day; fortunately, it is almost always something good. "These are exciting times," said Dean Emanuel. "With terrific faculty, terrific students, and terrific staff, we really are poised to move forward as an institution."

been less effective than other schools in generating media coverage and getting the word out about our successes and initiatives. That is why we took steps this fall to rectify this state of affairs. Using funds generated by a modest tuition increase, we hired a communications consultant, the Echols Group, to conduct an audit of the College's media and marketing efforts and recommend a plan of action.

This plan, which we received in December, offers a comprehensive set of recommendations, the most significant of which is the need to hire a full-time communications director which we plan to do this spring. We fully expect that such a hire, along with the other recommendations, will lead to improved media relations and publicity and more effective communication with our alumni, friends, and external community.

As always, we are fortunate to have so many supporters and friends. I look forward to seeing many of you in the months ahead.

Center for the Comparative Study for Metropolitan Growth to Take Students to Rio

Rio de Janeiro, like other major metropolitan areas across the globe, faces a wide range of serious environmental health challenges. This May, students will be given the opportunity to experience a unique, 32-day, interdisciplinary program and use Rio's peerless surroundings as a laboratory to study cutting edge environmental health issues, such as the degradation of Rio's spectacular beaches from industrial and residential pollution and the loss of biodiversity in the Atlantic rainforest as the city's luxury high rise condominiums and shantytown communities increasingly dominate the landscape.

Students will also study with environmental and public health advocates, ecologists, lawyers and government officials to explore issues such as the challenges of insuring water quality for human use in a diverse city of nearly six million people.

This program is sponsored by the Georgia State University departments of Health Sciences, Anthropology, Geography, the Institute of Public Health and the College of Law. For more information send an email to Professor Colin Crawford at ccrawford@gsu.edu or call 404/651-2058.

Center for Law, Health & Society

The recently established Center for Law, Health & Society is actively developing the Health Law Partnership (HeLP), an interdisciplinary community collaboration among the center, the Atlanta Legal Aid Society and Children's Healthcare of Atlanta to improve the health of low-income children and their families in metropolitan Atlanta. By combining the health care expertise of hospital professionals with the legal expertise of attorneys, HeLP will provide a coordinated and integrated set of services to address the multiple social and economic determinants of children's health. Attorney Sylvia Caley was hired to begin developing both the on-site legal clinics at Children's at Eggleston and Children's at Scottish Rite and the educational programs for HeLP.

Director of the center, Professor Charity Scott, collaborated in the creation of a new joint-degree program in law and health administration between the College of Law and the Robinson College of Business, approved by the Board of Regents. Students can elect to combine a JD degree with one of the following business degrees: (1) Master of Science in Health Administration (MSHA) or (2) Master of Business Administration/Master of Health Administration (MBA/MHA).

For more information about the Center or how to become involved in its activities such as the Graduate Health Law Network, please contact Assistant Director Jerri Nims at 404/651-0599 or visit <http://law.gsu.edu/clhs>.

Tax Clinic Resolved 22 Cases

The College of Law's Tax Clinic, working with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), resolved twenty-two cases involving low-income taxpayers, that were docketed on the September 7, 2004, U.S. Tax Court Atlanta trial calendar. Proposed deficiencies amounted to $143,588, and of this amount, 89% or $129,165 was eliminated. The Tax Clinic provides federal tax controversy resolution services to taxpayers residing throughout the state of Georgia. It has been operating since 1992 as one of the components of the College's lawyer skills training program. Law students participate in all aspects of resolving controversies with the IRS, including interviewing clients, preparing cases for appeal conferences and appearing at the conferences themselves, preparing offers-in-compromise, filing petitions with the United States Tax Court, negotiating settlements with the IRS and appearing before the Tax Court. The tax clinic was recently awarded another $85,000 from the IRS to support future operations.

CNCR Receives Grants from the Hewlett Foundation

CNCR is the recipient of two seed grants from the Hewlett Foundation. The first grant of $30,000 is for a project entitled "The Biology of Conflict Resolution: Exploring the Nexus." The second grant, $25,000, is for concept development of an International Center for Conflict Resolution Education, in partnership with the Ohio Office of Dispute Resolution and Temple University. These two awards from the Hewlett Foundation are the final contributions the organization will designate to the development of theory in the field of conflict resolution.

The College of Law Welcomes Visiting and Guest Faculty and Fellows for 2004-05

Faculty Fellow Gene W. Matthews

For the past 25 years, Gene Matthews, a leading national figure in the area of public health law, has served as a legal advisor to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Mr. Matthews completed his position with the CDC in 2004 and is currently developing the Institute of Public Health in partnership with the CDC Foundation with the goal of expanding the use of law as a tool in public health practice. For the 2005 fiscal year, Mr. Matthews is a College of Law faculty fellow sponsored by the college's Center for Law, Health & Society and the Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth, as well as the Georgia State's Institute of Public Health.

Visiting Professor Timothy W. Floyd

Tim Floyd, who held the J. Hadley Edgar Chair at the Texas Tech University School of Law, is teaching Criminal Procedure I and Criminal Law I as a visiting professor at Georgia State this year. Professor Floyd began his legal career with a clerkship with Judge Phyllis Kravitch of the 11th Circuit. He came back to Georgia this fall with his wife, Daisy Hurst Floyd, who accepted the position of Dean at Mercer University School of Law. This spring, Professor Floyd is also teaching a clinic at the new Capital Defenders Program. Students from Georgia State, Emory, Mercer and UGA are participating.

Research Fellow Gregory Jones

Greg Jones is currently the director of research for the College of Law Consortium on Negotiation and Conflict Resolution (CNCR), the editor-in-chief for CNCR Press and during this fiscal year, a College of Law Research Fellow. As a research fellow, Mr. Jones will serve as a resource to law faculty in the area of empirical and interdisciplinary research. Mr. Jones taught "Statistics and the Law" at the college this past summer. During the fall, he held a faculty workshop on empirical legal research. He is available to consult with individual faculty who may wish to add empirical, interdisciplinary or statistical dimensions to their scholarship.

Miller Lecture draws audience; Spring Lecture Scheduled

Walter E. Dellinger III became the 35th Henry J. Miller Distinguished lecturer on November 4, 2004, when he delivered a speech entitled "The Supreme Court Today" to a large crowd in the Student Center Speakers Auditorium, just three days after the nation's presidential election.

Lillian BeVier, John S. Shannon Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of Virginia, will present the 36th Henry J. Miller Lecture at 6 p.m. on Thursday, March 17, 2005. For more information call 404/651-4360 or send an email to lawdevelopment@gsu.edu.

Georgia State Students Distinguish Themselves on Winter Bar Exam

Georgia State University College of Law graduates shut out their in-state rivals on Georgia's February 2004 bar exam, posting the highest scores across the board. Georgia State grads had the highest average scores on the Multi-state Bar Exam and the highest pass rates for both first-time and repeat test takers.

2003-2004 Donor Recognition

Annual giving from our graduates has reached new heights. Just look at the figures! Overall graduate participation reached 21%, up from last year's 17%. Fourteen classes achieved a 20% participation rate or better, up from six last year. Graduates from 14 law firms achieved a 100% alumni participation rate, up from two last year. The college's endowment grew from $431,893 in 1996 to $5,606,874 today and the college's 14 endowed scholarship funds have now reached $1,146,162.

The college gives special recognition to all 15 law firms with a 100% participation rate for fiscal year 2004 and extends sincere appreciation to all of the volunteers and participants who contributed and continue to support the college.

Oglethorpe Legal Society

Inspired by Georgia legal history, in the spring of 2003 a group of law students founded The Oglethorpe Legal Society. In colonial days in Savannah groups that gathered to discuss matters of the day, many with colorful names, abounded — the Amicable Society, St. Andrew's Club and even the Ugly Club, to name a few. The student founders of the Oglethorpe Legal Society sought to emulate that tradition.

One goal of the society is to demonstrate that the College of Law, while housed in Atlanta, serves the entire state of Georgia. Law students are assisted by alumni members who hold seats on the executive committee and who actively contribute to the organization's goals. More specifically, the goals of the society are: to provide networking opportunities, to sponsor CLE programs for members, to sponsor programs that address emerging legal issues in Georgia, to raise the visibility of the pool of exceptional legal talent of Georgia State graduates and to foster a stronger sense of alumni identity among graduates.

This fall, the Society sponsored what it plans to make an annual event: a CLE program taught by Georgia State law faculty for Georgia State law graduates. Held on October 23rd at the Georgia Convention Center in Savannah, the inaugural event included as presenters Dean Kaminshine; Professors Lanier, Milich, and Sobelson; and special guests, former Court of Appeals Judge Irwin W. Stolz Jr. and Professor Emeritus of the University of Georgia Law School, Erwin Surrency. For additional information about the Oglethorpe Legal Society, contact Jimmy Hurt at jimmyhurt@charter.net.

Graduate Leadership Council Seeks Members

The college's Graduate Leadership Council (G.L.C.) is the governing body of the Law Graduates Association and provides a wide range of services to the College of Law such as event planning, student recruitment and fund-raising assistance.

The council is comprised of two or more members of each graduating class. These members serve as G.L.C. Class Representatives. Representatives serve a term of office for two years, following a nomination and acceptance of the invitation to serve on the council. We are currently seeking new or additional class representatives for the following classes in particular: 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1996. You may nominate an individual to serve or nominate yourself. For more information contact Delita Marsland at 404/651-2040 or send an email to lawdevelopment@gsu.edu.

SPOTLIGHT

Alumni presented Mentor Award in Philadelphia

Susan Colussy was presented the 2004 Sam Williamson Mentor Award in Philadelphia during the national convention for the American Immigration Lawyers Association in June. She is a 1986 law graduate and immigration lawyer who has spent nearly 19 years helping immigrants with limited incomes. She runs a low-cost immigration clinic called Catholic Social Services (CSS). Sue was recognized for mentoring law students with an interest in immigration law. She has mentored dozens of Atlanta immigration attorneys and has been honored by Mayor Shirley Franklin and the State Bar of Georgia. Susan began work at CSS while in her last quarter of law school. Over the years, many of Georgia's law students have interned with her clinic as well as summer students from law schools around the country. Susan would like to invite new lawyers to volunteer at the clinic and learn about the practice of immigration law. For more information call 404/885-6571 or visit www.cssatlanta.com.

ATTENTION LAW GRADUATES!

Have you moved? Are you running for office? Have you obtained a new job, position or received an award or special recognition? Please help us update our records. Send your personal and professional news to lawdevelopment@gsu.edu.

YOU'RE INVITED!

Attend a complimentary lunch at Powell Goldstein on Thursday, March 10, 2005. Hear about faculty and student accomplishments and learn how you can help to keep Georgia State listed with the top 100 law schools in the nation. RSVP before March 3rd to lawdevelopment@gsu.edu or call 404/651-2040.

Intellectual Property Initiative Update

In March 2004, the Intellectual Property (IP) initiative was officially kicked off and an IP Advisory Board was formed. The board completed its initial plans and program goals and initiated a "Founders" campaign to secure financial support for the program. As of early September, over $100,000 was committed in gifts and pledges to the IP fund and more than 50 IP founders committed time and money.

On October 9, a celebration was held at the Commerce Club to recognize the ongoing success of the new IP initiative, thank the current founders for their support and share the exciting plans for expansion of the intellectual property law program.

In the near term, plans are underway to add a website, a mentoring program, an externship program, seminars and writing competitions. Committees are being formed to assist on all aspects of this initiative. We would like to

Members of the Intellectual Property Advisory Group gather at their first celebration. Graduate Leadership Council Salutes Class of 2004

More than 75 guests attended the Sixth Annual Newly Minted Lawyers Cocktail Reception hosted by the Graduate Leadership Council (GLC). The event was held on Thursday, November 11, 2004, at the Commerce Club. Each year, the council welcomes new law graduates into the College of Law's alumni family and applauds graduates for passing the bar exam. This year's overall bar passage rate was 92 percent.

The program began with a presentation from the president of the council, Amy Bogartz, followed by a presentation from five other graduate organizations: Intellectual Property Law Initiative, Graduate Health Law Network, Cobb Alumni Group, Oglethorpe Legal Society and the Health Law Partnership (HeLP) Pro Bono Opportunity. Several faculty members were in attendance including Interim Dean

Steven Kaminshine.

The Graduate Leadership Council thanks everyone for supporting council events and activities. For more information about the Graduate Leadership Council or other graduate organizations call 404/651-2040 or visit <http://law.gsu.edu> for more information.

Trial Practice Teams Post Victories Across the Country

Paige Boorman and Brandon Taylor as advocates — with Marshall Dees, Kristin Haynes, Neera Makwana, and Graham McDonald as witnesses — won the William Daniel National Mock Trial Competition hosted by the State Bar of Georgia. Paige Boorman was named Best Advocate, with Brandon Taylor a very close second. Alumni Brian Fortner ('00) and Joe Burford ('88) coached our national champions.

Another Georgia State University College of Law team was the national runner-up at the Lone Star Classic National Mock Trial Competition in San Antonio, Texas. Georgia State lost to the University of Buffalo in the final round. Team members were Marc Clark, Andrew Gebhardt, Naiyareh Karimimanesh and Amanda Lowery. Tom Jones and Brian Duva ('02) coached the team.

Also national runner-ups: Steve Shewmaker and Laura Dyes as attorneys, and Ed Napier and Jessica Reece as witnesses, reached the final round of the National Trial Advocacy Competition at Michigan State University before losing to SMU. David Brauns, Chip Hodge, Phil Pilgrim and Trea Pipkin — coached by Cheryl Champion and Tom Jones — traveled to Buffalo, New York, for the Buffalo Invitational, bested 26 other teams to reach the quarter finals and finished fifth overall.

Georgia State's National Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL) trial team won two of their three preliminary rounds in the NACDL National Trial Competition. Kryss Roch was awarded the Top Oralist Award for the third round of the entire competition. Other team members were Kennita Haley, Jason Sheffield and Seth Martin. The team was coached by Denise DeLaRue ('95) and Professors Roy Sobelson and Ellen Podgor.

Board of Regents honors College of Law Founder and Benefactor

The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia recognized Georgia State University graduate and law school founder and benefactor W. Lee Burge as one of six inaugural "Regents' Hall of Fame" award recipients. The award was given to three outstanding faculty members and three notable alumni of the 34 University System of Georgia institutions for their contributions to public higher education in the state.

Burge served as a member of the Board of Regents and led efforts to establish the College of Law. The W. Lee Burge Chair of Law and Ethics at the college is named in recognition of his service and he has established a College of Law endowed scholarship. In addition to Mr. Burge's financial commitment to the law school, he is an emeritus member of the College of Law Board of Visitors and has served on the Georgia State University Foundation Board, the Robinson College of Business Board of Advisors and the Georgia State Burge, who earned his bachelor's degree in accountancy from Georgia State in 1942, enjoyed a long career with Equifax, ultimately serving as the company's chairman. Upon his 50th anniversary with Equifax, the company established a presidential scholarship in his honor at Georgia State.

The Pro Bono Recognition Program was launched during college-wide meetings in August. Dean Kaminshine, with the assistance of several members of the faculty and Michael Monahan, Pro Bono Project director for the State Bar of Georgia, presented a program that included the unveiling of the web page for the program. The web page, accessible from the college's home page, contains contact information for hundreds of public service opportunities and allows students to record their volunteer hours and keep a running tally. Stephen Bright, director of the Southern Center for Human Rights and recipient of the college's 2003 Ben F. Johnson Jr. Public Service Award, helped to launch the program with a noon-time address to the student body.

FACULTY BRIEFS

Ronald Blasi co-authored an article in the Journal of Taxation and Regulation of Financial Institutions entitled "New Capitalization Rules: Their Sweeping Effect on Financial Institutions." He also co-authored "Tax Strategies for Community Bankers" published by the American Bankers Association. Commerce Clearing House published Professor Blasi's 2004 edition of the CCH Bank Tax Guide. Professor Blasi was awarded an $85,000 grant from the Internal Revenue Service to support the operation of the Tax Clinic.

Mark Budnitz presented papers at a conference at the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank on prepaid stored value cards; at the Consumer Law Professors Conference at the University of Houston on recent developments in payments law; and at a meeting of the Conference of State Bank Supervisors in Chicago on the applicability of electronic payment rules to on-line payday loans. He also led a workshop at the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank on the need for a uniform consumer payments law. At the American Bar Association's annual meeting he chaired a session for the Cyberspace Law Committee's working group on consumer protection. Professor Budnitz was quoted in articles on consumer finance issues in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette in June and in Newsweek in September. In November, he was quoted in a New York Times article about consumers who were unhappy with automated debit programs.

Clark Cunningham presented "Taking the Punishment out of the Process" at the Marilyn Stein Bellet Conference on Ethics and the Law. The conference was sponsored by the Fordham School of Law and Low Country Legal Aid in Hilton Head, South Carolina. Professor Cunningham has been appointed by the Fulton County Board of Commissioners to the Fulton County Criminal Justice Blue Ribbon Commission.

Andi Curcio is a member of the advisory board for the Center for Justice and Democracy (CJD) and drafted a fact sheet on "why we need tort law" which will be part of the bigger package of information compiled by numerous academics and provided to the media by the CJD in its attempt to counter some of the mis-information distributed by tort reform proponents. Professor Curcio is continuing her work on the Bar Exam with the Society of American Law Teachers (SALT) sub-committee. On behalf of SALT, she drafted a paper outlining alternatives to the existing bar exam. The paper was distributed by SALT at the ABA/NCBE/AASL October conference.

Anne Emanuel is serving as the chair of the Georgia Assessment Team of the ABA Death Penalty Moratorium Implementation Project.

Marjorie Girth was reappointed by the Georgia Supreme Court to the Commission on Access & Fairness in the Courts, formerly the Commission on Equality, and the State Bar of Georgia reappointed her to its Standards of the Profession Committee.

He also published a new edition of the 2004 cumulative supplement to WEST'S Federal Administrative Practice Manual with Charles McManis and the 2004 cumulative supplement to Entertainment Law. "Questions and Answers About the Napster Case" (Chapter 16) in John Fodor's Understanding Computer Ethics was written by Professor Landau. He presented Law Review articles scheduled for print at a series of conferences last year. Professor Landau appeared on the cover of the October issue of the Georgia Bar Journal and in the magazine's article "Slice of Life" on the daily practice of 11 Georgia lawyers.

Charles Marvin continues to work internationally on law development and reform. He was featured in an article entitled "Building the Rule of Law in Eastern Europe and Eurasia" published in the Spring 2004 University of Chicago Law School Record. After teaching summer courses in Latvia and Lithuania this August, he served on the Atlanta host committee of the International Law Section for the American Bar Association Annual Meeting, as one of the hosts for the Central European and Eurasian Law Initiative luncheon and meeting and as a panelist on a meeting session on recent legislative developments in Central and Eastern Europe. Professor Marvin was named Vice Chair in charge of Eastern European Law on the European Law Committee of the ABA International Law Section for 2004-2005.

Paul Milich helped present a program at Georgia State entitled "Proof of Electronic Signatures and Documents at Trial." The program was sponsored by the law firm of Lord, Bissell and Brook and by the College of Law and the College of Business. This program was repeated in Washington D.C. in October. Professor Milich also presented a program for Georgia probate and city judges in June and an August ICLE program on "Evidentiary Issues in Contract Cases." Professor Milich presented a program on evidence for city and county attorneys in September, and programs for juvenile court judges and new probate judges in early and late November.
